M.Sc. in Tourism Futures Studies

Faculty of International Business

Program Structure

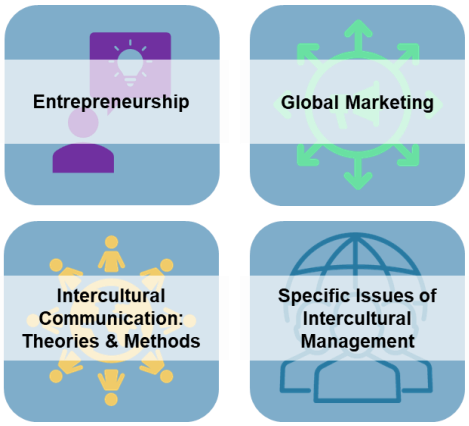

(SPO 1 effective from Winter Semester 2025/2026)

During the first semester, students complete a fixed set of core courses covering fundamental concepts in tourism futures, digital transformation and AI in tourism, and research methods, as well as one elective course. In the second semester, students complete more advanced courses and a project in tourism futures, as well as an advanced course in research methods and two electives. Following the second semester, students have the option to continue directly to the Master Thesis stage, or alternatively integrate an internship or study abroad semester into their master's studies (30 ECTS each). When electing to complete an internship or semester abroad in the third semester, the thesis is completed in a fourth semester. Students are also required to complete a personal skills course of their choosing prior to graduation.

Electives Options

1st Semester Electives - one required:

2nd Semester Electives - two required:

Optional 3rd Semester

During an optional 3rd semester, students have the possibility to complete either an internship or spend a semester abroad at one of our partner universities. When taking advantage of this option, students will collect an additional 30 ECTS credits that will be counted toward their Master's degree (thereby collecting a total of 120 credits). Certain conditions apply when completing the optional semester, such as minimum requirements, duration and content.
